MEMPHIS.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 15, 1852.

Largest Circulation in the City.

Official Journal of the City.

Reading Matter on Every Page.

TERMS REDUCED.

The Cheapest Paper in the South!

In consideration of the increased, still increasing patronage of the Daily Appeal, the proprietors have determined upon the reduction of the subscription price of their newspaper.

For the first six months it will be furnished at $2 for each copy.

When we consider the enormous size of our paper, the vast amount and variety of the reading material it contains, it may justly be claimed, that these rates are the lowest ever paid for a newspaper in the South.

Copies may be had up in neighborhoods at 25 cents per issue.

Any person sending us a club of twenty, at the foregoing price, will be entitled to a discount of 10% off the regular price. Old clubs may be renewed from year to year on the foregoing terms.

WHILE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL FAIR.

The weather has been most favorable of the Fair has been most delightful, the sun bright, warm and cheerful, while a gentle breeze tempers its rays and makes it agreeable to promenade about the grounds, upon the soft green velvety carpeting, which nature has spread for the tiny feet of her fair daughters. The grand display of flowers and emblems, a full share of the beauty and loveliness of the surrounding country. It is impossible to more than approximate the number present, but we may remark that the Amphitheatre was well filled, while here, there, and there, about the beautiful groves, under the spreading oaks, were gathered gay knots of young and trim maidens, in various costumes, whirling away so many hours in cheerful converse, regardless of everything save what might be transpiring in their own immediate circle.

Among the distinguished strangers, attendance yesterday, we observed several proprietors and active agriculturists from Mississippi and Tennessee. Among them, we may name Mr. J. C. Peacock, President, Franklin Franklin, Mr. Peacock, Secretary, and Col. J. B. Fair and Dr. H. Hudson, members of the Board of Directors of the Marshall County (Miss.) Agricultural Society, and Col. H. Conner, President, and Col. J. G. Moseley, Director of the Fayette County Agricultural and Mechanical School.

The competition yesterday was not so agreeable as would have been desired to see it; but the interest in the proceedings continues unabated. The already large audience in floral Hall continues to grow by daily accessions, and the Hall is constantly crowded by interested spectators. Among the various attractions more attention than a large mirror, with elegant gilt frame, which stands near the center of the aisle, whether it is the excellence of the glass, or the workmanship of the frame, we cannot say, but we enjoyed much pleasure (and they were very nice persons) in watching the delight. We did not gainsay it with any delight. We do not know the master's name, where he does his business, nor the thickness of the plate; but we do observe that it was an object of much regard, and especially to the ladies.

A set of double-handles has been placed on exhibition since we last made a note of them. It is silver mounted and quite handsome.

Capps & Mills have a range of cooking, of new design and elegant workmanship, which we examined after the close of the exhibition yesterday, and do not hesitate to pronounce it a very superior article. Saffarrell & Stratton exhibit a large cooking stove that excels much.

The exhibition of Sewing Machines exhibits, in addition to Singer's, already noticed, Wieseler & Wilson's and Grover & Baker's patents. Each has its friends and advocates. The samples of work, executed by each, which may be seen, will enable the ladies to determine which machine is best adapted to their particular wants.

Another exhibition of Hair Works specimens makes the collection in this very complete and elegant. There are wreaths worked in hair with the various flowers formed of different colors of hair, which are unique and elegant. We never saw anything that surpassed them.

An addition has been made to the collection of works of art, in a very beautiful and remarkable style, consisting of a bust of the Queen of England, a portrait of the Duke of Wellington, and a bust of Charles Wesley. There are other articles inside the Hall, which might be noticed with propriety, for this is the most creditable portion of the exhibition and attracts more admiration than anything connected with the Fair, but we must defer them for the present.

There are a number of boxes, bags, and other articles made of leather, and other light pleasure vehicles of the latest design and superior workmanship. We do not know whether they are entered for premiums, or only placed upon exhibition for the public view. In either case he has the benefit of this notice.

While the papers bring us news of disturbances and riots ending fatally at some points, it is gratifying to note the good order and general harmony which prevails at our Fair. Everything goes off quietly and pleasantly, and with the exception of the due, we are glad to be able to announce will cross to trouble henceforth, there is nothing to distract the enjoyment of the public.

There has been made to thoroughly spruce the grounds from the city to the Fair Grounds, and persons desirous to attend, may do so now with the assurance that there will be no danger or annoyance or inconvenience from such.

Besides the regular proceedings of the Fair yesterday, Judge P. T. Scroggs as previously announced, delivered an address upon the Home. This was a short, but forcible, pointed and pointed, and contains much useful and instructive information imparted in a plain, forcible, and at times humorous manner. The audience listened to the speaker with plenteous attention, and manifested their appreciation of the effort by frequent applause.

The following premiums were awarded yesterday:

THIRD PRIZE—True Briton.

SECOND PRIZE—True Briton.

PRIZE—True Briton.
